

Kids vs Adults Weekly News S'Quiz

Hello and welcome to Squiz Kids Today ... your fresh take on what's happening in the world around you.

I'm Bryce Corbett

It's Thursday, November 7...

In Squiz Kids Today ... Trump wins the White House; Kenya's elephant beehives; Squiz-E's election sniffing; and a new planet for our solar system.

That's what's making news, kid's style...

THE LOWDOWN

After months of campaigning, after hundreds of speeches and rallies all over the country - it came down to one day of voting in the United States yesterday - and in the end, Americans chose Donald Trump to be their President for the next four years.

In the weeks leading up to the election, the polls suggested it was going to be a close race. But it turned out to be not that close afterall, with Trump's Republican party winning the election convincingly.

It means Donald Trump will become American President for the second time. He was President for four years from 2017 to 2021. It also means his opponent, Kamala Harris from the Democrat party, fell short in her attempt to become the first female President of the United States.

As with all elections - there were plenty of people in America who were last night celebrating the outcome. Just as there were many devastated by it.

What does it mean for Australia? It won't make any noticeable difference to your day to day life - but because America is such a big and influential country, the ripple effect of yesterday's election will be felt around the world.

SPIN THE GLOBE

Each day we give the world globe a spin and find a news story from wherever it stops, and today we've landed in Kenya ... in Africa ... where farmers are using bees to keep elephants off their crops.

Yes, that's right ... bees.

Now, you'd think an animal as big as an elephant would be scared of nothing. But bees - and especially their sting - really freak elephants out, understandably so. I mean, who likes getting stung by a bee? No matter how thick your skin might be?

A nine year study in Kenya has shown that in over 80% of instances where an elephant approaches a farm wanting to have a bit of a nibble on some delicious, freshly grown corn - the presence of beehives makes them change their mind.

It's being described as a win-win for farmers and elephants - providing a natural way for farmers to keep the hungry elephants at bay without causing any real danger to the animals. How clever.

SPACED OUT

Ok - here's a question for you. How many planets are in our solar system? Working back from the Sun, there's Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune ... that's eight planets. Pluto USED to be considered a planet until scientists downgraded it to dwarf planet status a couple of years. Poor Pluto.

But wrap your little heads around this ... scientists yesterday announced they think they may have found a ninth planet in our solar system.

Called Planet Nine - and located way, way, way out in outer space - it's been hiding in something called the Kuiper Belt.

If it exists - and scientists disagree on whether it does - it would be a planet out beyond Neptune and most likely covered in ice - as most things are that far from the Sun.

When will we know for sure? All eyes will be on a telescope which should be ready for use at the end of next year- allowing astronomers to see way further out into space than they currently can.

All eyes on a telescope.... Geddit? (DAD JOKE ALARM) ... ah yeah, fair enough - the dad joke alarm. I probably deserved that.

NEWSHOUNDS

Every Thursday, Squiz-E the Newshound sticks his snout into Squiz Kids HQ to report back on fishy things he's sniffed out on the internet .. and today, well, today, he's as tired as I've ever seen him. And that's because the US Presidential election has given rise to a flood of misinformation and disinformation.

There's the video on TikTok claiming to be of a huge crowd at a Trump rally - but which is really video footage from a recent Chappel Roan concert. There's the false claim on the platform X that Rhianna promised to record a new single if Kamala Harris won, and false claims, again on X, that Donald Trump has been appearing in public with a body-double look-alike instead of his wife, Melania.

And that's because elections are traditionally a time when misinformation spikes. People create rumours that aren't true and post them to social media in the hope their followers will believe them without checking.

But luckily: as good Newshounds - we all know how important it is to STOP. THINK and CHECK whenever we come across something online. And that's especially important during an election: because deciding who to vote for is an important part of living in a democracy.

And on the subject of Newshounds - congratulations to teachers Alison Summers from Valentine Public School in regional NSW and Nadia Santon from St Columba College in South Australia - you're the winners of the Allen + Unwin book packs we were giving away to teachers who were new sign ups last week to our new-look, recently renovated Newshounds free media literacy classroom resource - check it out at squizkids.com.au
